

Page 6/18 THE HOUSTON POST THURSDAY, MARCH 6, 1975

When will dinosaur at Museum of Natural Science be ready?

Action line

DIAL 621-7242
WRITE Action Line The Houston Post

ACTION LINE answers questions and solves problems of general and unusual interest. Replies appear ONLY in these columns. Complaints about products or business practices MUST be submitted in writing. Do not send valuable papers.

Will any of the funds President Ford released for the highway building program make it to Texas? Will this money enable the Highway Department to begin construction of the South Freeway—D.J.

A spokesman for the Texas Highway Department expects that Texas will receive some portion of the funds but application for the money will be made through the regular process. Any additional funds will simply move construction forward on projects already scheduled. Funding is a problem for the portion of the South Freeway inside the Loop. The portion of the freeway between the Loop and Angleton has been given priority. It should be a "usable facility" by the latter part of 1975.

I received a $5 check for jury duty. Is it legal for my employer to demand that I sign it over to get my pay for the day I missed?—E.D.

State law requires an employer to pay you only for the actual time you spend working. Employers are not required to pay you for time spent on jury duty or out of town. If you agree to sign over the check, this would be legal.

Are there any art fairs in the Austin area this spring?—J.R.

The only spring art festival listed by the Austin Chamber of Commerce is the Sertoma Art Fair. It will be held on the south shores of Town Lake on May 3-4.

I have reported three junked motor vehicles on the corner of Placent and Mangum to the city three times in the past year. The vehicles are still there. What do I do now?—R.K.

Health: Are braces needed?

By G.C. THROSTON, M.D.

I read your letter a few times to be certain you did write "thirteen months." This youngster is much, much too young for any leg manipulation. I don't think there is any way to correct bowed legs at this age. I've ever seen a baby who

I'm new here and...

I want to know why Houston buses have the destination or number on the front of the bus instead of the rear? I have run to the front of the bus many times just as the driver pulled away.—J.L.

A spokesman for Rapid Transit said the company has found front and side number designations to be the most acceptable. In the past, it was found that designations placed on the rear of the buses "just didn't add that much." Purchase and maintenance cost is another reason to use the minimum number of signs to provide "a reasonable amount of visibility."

Now that ACTION LINE has reported your complaint to the housing code division of the Public Works Department, 222-3831, you wait. The few weeks. Write again if you don't see any results.

When will reconstruction of the dinosaur at the Museum of Natural Science be completed? How long has the work been in progress?—S.F.

The reconstruction of a diplodocus from bones Antrix Carnegie collected in 1905 should be finished by the end of the year. Dr. Wann Langston, a vertebrate paleontologist from the University of Texas, has been working on the project since 1969 when the museum moved into its present building.

I ordered a $5 confinement set from the Fosdick Corp. back in October. In response to my letter stating I had not received my order, the company wrote that it had been shipped. Your help in recovering the $5 I sent will be appreciated.—E.L.

Fosdick's reply says you have been mailed a refund. The company's records show the order was shipped but the reply says it must have been lost in shipment.

Please give your full name and address when you call or write to ACTION LINE. Inside of inquiries, not their names, are used in this column. Unused inquiries cannot be acknowledged.

JUMBLE

Unscramble these four jumbles, one letter in each square, to form four ordinary words.

POASY
FLECT
AFDACE
YISMAL

Now arrange the circled letters to form the surprise answer, as suggested by the above cartoon.

Jumble: MANKY LOGIC ASTRAY TORRID
Answer: What is to do after twenty-four hours—CALL IT A DAY

Ask Dr. Brothers Am I oversexed?

By DR. JOYCE BROTHERS

Dear Dr. Brothers: I consider myself a healthy woman in terms of my sexuality but my husband often makes me feel that I'm oversexed or some kind of freak. He also makes me feel as if I'm getting a special gift every time he makes love to me. I mean, I always thought that sex was something a woman could take for granted in marriage — not something she had to beg or bargain for.

It's almost as if I'm given sex as a kind of reward for good behavior, which means doing everything my husband's way — not just in sex, but in how much money I can save on marketing, on how good the meals are, on whether or not I look at or comment on other men's virtues, etc. Now, if I get an A plus on behavior, all is well, but if I fail in any one of these areas, then I might as well be in a nursery.—C.J.

Dear C.J.: In the past, withholding sex was a woman's weapon, but now more and more women are writing me that their husbands are playing the same game. In fact, this may be a rebellion against what men may feel are too many demands and pressures on them, sexually as well as in other areas. Whether a man or a woman uses this technique to get his or her own way, it is an abuse of sex and is extremely destructive, not only to the marriage itself, but to the individuals involved.

Many men find times when, for one reason or another, they lose interest in sex. This doesn't mean they are going to be permanently impotent, nor does it indicate that they've lost interest in their wives. It may mean, however, that she's making too much of an issue of performance in sex.

Instant gratification in sex isn't always possible. The male just isn't constructed that way.

A man who is under great stress in work or who is weighed down with financial responsibilities may shift his sexual energy to meet the new pressures and stresses in his life. The well-adjusted man who doesn't feel sexually threatened or inhibited usually is able to discuss these outside pressures candidly with his wife.

If a wife isn't understanding, it she tends to nag or ridicule him, he may fail to communicate his real feelings, with the result that the couple will move further and further apart.

Sex should never be used as a weapon by either partner; nor should sex be used as an attempt to solve other problems that arise in a marriage. It takes a strong sense of emotional security not to equate sexual activity with masculinity or femininity.

The first step to be taken to solve your problems is to sit down and have an honest discussion with your husband. Try not to just talk — listen to his side of the story, but tell him honestly how you feel. Try not to criticism, but try to discover the reasons for his behavior. Your letter indicates that your husband is jealous. Ask yourself if you constantly or frequently compare him unfavorably with other men. If you do, consider how you would feel if he did this with other women? Wouldn't it make you feel insecure? If there is no realistic basis for his jealousy, then discuss this and try to make him feel more secure. Perhaps he feels that sex is the only thing you want from him. If this is the case, it might make him feel very insecure and very pressured.

Ask US

Your husband may be the kind of person who has always used love and sex. He may not know how to love in any other way. If this is the case, he needs professional help to be able to lead a full life and to protect your marriage.

What do flashing dash lights mean?

By CHARLOTTE SLATER

Even the greatest driver knows enough to suspect trouble when the car's whole dashboard flashes on.

But the different warning lights on your instrument panel call for different reactions. Some are more urgent than others.

There generally are two warning lights arranged below or around the speedometer. They are labeled "Gen." "Brake," "Temp" and "Oil."

"Gen." stands for generating. It is normal for this light to come on as you start the car. It simply means your battery is creating out energy for ignition. But the light should go off after the motor gets going, because the alternator should start putting energy back into the battery as the car runs.

If your "Gen." light comes on while you are driving, something definitely is wrong. The battery is putting out when it should be taking in. There is a need to stop the car immediately.

If you do, you may not be able to start it again. Continue driving to the nearest dealer, shop or service station and have the car checked. The problem may be as simple as a loose belt on the motor.

Some cars, instead of a "Gen." light, have what called an ammeter. It performs the same function, but also gives the charging rate of the alternator. The needle should move toward the section marked "C" for charge after the car gets going.

Most drivers are familiar with the "Brake" light as a warning that the parking or emergency brake is on. But it serves another very important function on many cars.

If the brake light comes on soon as you can and raise the hood to help the engine cool. You may have a broken fan belt, a loss of coolant from the radiator or any number of problems.

But don't try to remove the radiator cap or add water while the engine is hot. The coolant is under pressure in the radiator and you can get a severe burn by boiling with it.

If you can figure out what's wrong and the fix it, drive on cautiously after the engine cools. If you don't know the problem, don't attempt to drive. Call for help.

Try the brakes a couple of times to see how they behave. If you feel you can creep to the nearest service station safely, do so. If not, call for help.

"Temp" stands for temperature. If this light glows while you're driving, it means your engine is overheated. (The light will flash normally for a second as you start the car.)

Running an overheated engine can seriously damage it in short order. Stop the car as soon as you can and raise the hood to help the engine cool.

You may have a broken fan belt, a loss of coolant from the radiator or any number of problems.

But don't try to remove the radiator cap or add water while the engine is hot. The

It is no place to be tonight.

A major world premiere is happening in your living room tonight. Just lean back and let "Love Among the Ruins" surround you with wit, laughter and charm. It's a delightful romantic high comedy—and the first time together for Katharine Hepburn and Laurence Olivier. Directed by George Cukor and written by James Costigan. Have a good time.

Katharine Hepburn and Laurence Olivier
'Love Among the Ruins' 8pm Channel 10

Presented by IBM