An Age-Old Jealousy Flares

BY BETTY EWING

Diplodocus the dinosaur skeleton DID seem to be a bit broken up at the elegant black tie party at the Alfred C. Glassell Jr. Hall at the Museum of Natural Science.

Probably heard that designer Pauline Trigere had expressed a preference for his younger roommate Ankylosaurus, a mere 100 million years old as compared with Diplo's 140 million.

Actually it was because Ankylosaurus looks more like a big turtle and Miss Trigere has a thing about turtles, all 305 in her collection.

To wit: She wore one of those high on her elegant fat-bellied black wool midi as she commiserated the N-M fashion show Tuesday night following a festive cocktail buffet.

But Diplodocus, his bone strewn ever so cheerily around the models runway with its ugly head perched in the lush greenery provided by Wayne Rutledge of the Poyllis Diller Exotic Plants, truly was the star of the show.

Funds from the social season luncheon Tuesday night will be poured into the tedious "dress the dinosaur" job that entails weeks of laborious articulation of the bones by a trained paleontologist. Then an application of plastic "flesh" with a simulated skin over one-half of the dinosaur will give the viewer an idea of the immense size. (Its head will rise 20 feet in the two-story hall.)

Probably Diplodocus' best friend, young Jim Davis (he is honorary curator of the dinosaur) arrived early with his beautiful Betty who wore a girly printed gown of yellow and red and green.

Jim's full of facts about dinosaurs, like how Ankylosaurus originally was made by Sinclair for the New York World's Fair and then was mounted on a truck and taken around the country for five years.

"It's hollow now and weighs about a thousand pounds but then it weighed between four and six tons," said Jim.

Dr. Thomas Paley, director of the museum, was at the party with his lovely Jeanne. He is dinosaur-minded, too, but wasn't forgetting the Museum's other wonderful attractions—like the 1025 pound black marlin, the first fish over 1000 pounds caught with a rod and reel by none other than Houston's world-famous sportman Alfred C. Glassell Jr. He and his pretty blonde wife Clare (they donated the funds for the Alfred C. Glassell Jr. Hall at the Museum) were among the guests at the "Dress the Dinosaur" party.

Cigaret Case Around the Neck
Nolan's pretty Alex (Mrs. Kirk) Pruitt was wearing a unique accessory with her pleated gown—a gold cigarette case necklace that was a gift from Designer Trigere. Pauline, she says, has a utility belt with attached essentials like flashlight and swizzle stick.

Incidentally, Miss Trigere charged to a white egret pantsuit for a nightclub fling at the Milton with N-M's Lawrence Marcus (he introduced her at the dinosaur party), hands-on in a green velvet dinner jacket, her assistant Margie Lefevre. Larry's date Magda Lajla of Mexico City—Michelle and Collier Harley, John Collins and Irene Day, Lybia di Perseus and Danny Ray.

Meanwhile, back at the Museum.
Margaret and George Alcorn (she was chairman) arrived with their parents, the Charles Alcorns (he's a former Museum president) and the J. W. Edmondsons, Polly (Mrs. Ed) Turner was wearing a fringed white midi and Virginia (Mrs. Wally) Stewart, wife of the judge, was a real vamp in a sleek iridescent sequined pantsuit and open-toed sandals.

Derby (Mrs. Ed) Gerlach, wife of the Orchestra Director, chose a black velvet gown glittering in rhinestones and Frieda (Mrs. J. R.) Franklin was in a white four-length gown buttoned down the front. Friends were delighted to see Mr. F. looking like a million. He had been on the ailing list.

Also at the party: Artie Lamer Briggs (he'll have a show at Dulboe Gallery opening Friday night) and wife Genda, Museum President and Mrs. Charles Fleetwood, the Megan Davies, the Lewis Balle II (she's president of the Museum Guild which has donated the funds for the preparation of the dinosaur bones purchased by the Junior League for the Museum in 1960) . . . the Albert Pops, the Tom Martin Davies, the James J. Johnsons and her charming mother, Mrs. Marge Marple . . . the Alfred J. Knapps, the Robert H. Bakers, Dr. and Mrs. William G. Guerrier, the Marvin McMurrys Jr., the Robert Frenches, the J. W. Links Jr., the Edward Pearsons (Gogie is a handsome black gown with its mid length hem bound in velvet) . . . Artist J. Anthony (Jim) Wills and wife Dottie in chic black chiffon pajamas. Mary and Bill Spencer, Marjorie and Percy Selden, Artist Robert Joy and Mrs. Joy, Shirley and Lake Johnson and her delightful mother, Mrs. Jack Beach, the A. L. Seligs, Fannie Lou (Mrs. Pat) Alessandrini with the Alcorns because Pat was on a hunting trip . . . the John Velters, Patty and Fred Dixon, Jessie Lee Schindler, Mr. and Mrs. Jones Lykes, Mr. and Mrs. David Knapp, Patricia Pauline, the A. J. Wrayns, the J. R. Cravens, Collier Doug Sanders and his pretty wife, the A. Knox Tysons, the Davis Underwoods, Mr. and Mrs. J. Burke Cravens Jr., the Burke Bakers Jr., Mrs. Burke Baker, the R. R. Cravens II, the James C. Brouns, the Meredith Longs, Marty and Max Levine, the Richard McKays, the Roger Sanders, the Carl Whitcomb, Mrs. Charles Peritz, Dr. and Mrs. Ed Deak, the Bill Balkens, the Harry Calkins, the John Carters, the H. L. Dilans, the Milton Eckerts, the Ed Drossers, the Ray Jagmans, the Carl Lees and many others.

Ankylosaurus, finally settled in Houston after five years on the road, seems right at home with it in Jim and Betty Davis and Dr. Thomas Paley, director of the Museum of Natural Science.

Gadabout
WITH MAURINE PARKHURST

Recent visitors in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Leeper were his mother, Mrs. John Leeper, and his sister, Clarice Cone, and her daughter, Debbie, and son Roger Dale, all of Temple.

Maurine Jarrell is now calling Santa Barbara, Calif., home. The many friends she left behind in Houston are happy to learn of her grand position she has with one of that city's oldest and most respected law firms.

Mrs. Clyde (Nora) Fisher, and children, and her niece Lynn Fisher, have returned from Rockdale where they visited Nora's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Watson, and Clyde's parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Fisher, in Ganse.

It was the last "vacation fling" for the children before school and study.

It was "family reunion time" recently in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. (Bud and Helen) Storch. Guests were her sister and husband, Ruth and George DeBault, and her 31-year-old son, Herman Wehner, of La Crosse, Wis.

First Meeting
Members of the Women's Auxiliary, Houston chapter, American Institute of Architects will hold their first meeting of the season at 10 a.m. Tuesday, Sept. 15, in the Village Hall at Jocke's, Town and Country.

Houston Grand Opera Assn. will present the program. Mrs. Malcolm T. Tugler is chairman.
