

Page 4, Section 1

HOUSTON CHRONICLE Wednesday, November 19, 1975

Spy Budget Estimated at $4 Billion

That's for 'National Intelligence'—There's $2 Billion More for 'Tactical' Program

BY LESLIE H. GELB
with news from Washington

The developing debate over the national intelligence community has been discussed for the first time of this year's appropriations for the "national intelligence program."

This year's figure, knowledgeable officials said, is $4 billion, hidden in the $90 billion Pentagon spending bill approved by the Senate Tuesday.

These officials said that it is covered by each specific budget titles as "other procurement, Air Force," "contingencies, defense," and "procurement, defense agencies."

Last September Rep. Robert N. Giamma, D-Cong., made the first move toward forcing disclosure of the real size and nature of these items. Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., pressed the issue again in a Senate floor speech last Friday.

The knowledgeable officials who Tuesday disclosed the overall intelligence budget for the first time said they did so in the hope of forcing closer congressional scrutiny of vaguely worded multi-million-dollar budget titles and to bring about an open debate on the secret intelligence budget.

The $4 billion figure, covering the "national intelligence program" and known only to a few dozen legislators, does not include another $2 billion for what is referred to as tactical intelligence, being provided by the Army, Navy and Air Force.

It has long been known that the national intelligence program—estimated in the past as running as high as $5 billion—has been mixed in with the Pentagon budget without identification, but the specific hiding places in that budget have never been disclosed authoritatively.

The program, according to officials in Congress and the administration, includes $750 million for the Central Intelligence Agency tucked inside a $2.1 billion budget item identified only as "other procurement, Air Force."

Other agencies included in his program and the funds designated are as follows:

- The National Security Agency, a semi-autonomous communications and cryptological agency under the Pentagon's umbrella, budgeted for about $1.5 billion.
- The National Reconnaissance Office, another semi-autonomous unit under the Air Force that runs the satellite photography program, set to spend under $2 billion.
- The Defense Intelligence Agency, which will together intelligence for the armed services and the Secretary of Defense, is scheduled to spend about $100 million.

Since 1947, most Congressmen have been voting billions for intelligence each year, knowing only that they were approving military hardware described more precisely than "electronic control equipment," "communication equipment" or "erection of structures and acquisition of land."

Now, however, some congressional and administration officials are so convinced that the intelligence budget—at least, in an overall total—should be subject to a debate on national priorities, that they are providing that information to the press.

Others, including Giamma and Cranston, are using various legislative techniques to get these intelligence expenditures into the open without technically violating congressional rules on secrecy.

The general rule is that classified information can be made public only by the executive branch, not by Congress or the courts. Certain committees, however, have effectively disclosed classified material by a majority vote of their own members. Individual legislators who take this responsibility on themselves face censure.

The administration has opposed any budget disclosures on the ground that other nations would be more able to gauge the strength of the program.

Those pressing for disclosure know that the sentiment is decidedly bipartisan. In September, the House Appropriations Committee voted 20 to 19 not even to receive intelligence budget figures from its own subcommittee, and the whole House voted 271 to 177 not to make the budget public.

Technical sources said that the major portions of the national intelligence program are included as parts of the following titles:

- "Contingencies, Defense" is a $2.5 billion item described as financing "unforeseeable emergency and extraordinary expenses for confidential military purposes."
- "World Wide Military Command and Control System" is an annual operating cost of between $1.5 billion and $3 billion, said to include "large numbers of varied elements and subsystems that are supposed to provide commanders and managers with the data they need to operate the military establishment during war or peacetime conditions."
- "Procurement, Defense Agencies" is a $120 million item that does not describe the activities involved.
- "Special Activities" is a $62.5 million item for procurement of equipment to support a number of special activities of the Department of Defense.
- "Research, Development, Test, and Evaluation, Defense Agencies" is a $167 million item for a variety of activities some of which are classified.

FBI May Have Led King To Motel Where He Died, Memo Indicates

(FROM PAGE 1)

House had approved it, recommended furnishing a cooperative news media source with the information that King, while staying at a hotel in Memphis, was staying in a white-owned hotel despite the fact that a black-owned hotel in Memphis, the Lorraine Motel, was a reference to the Lorraine Motel in Memphis.

The staff lawyer said King's notation was the only evidence that he seemed to have been put into operation, but he noted that newspaper stories to the contrary appeared at the time. According to the staff lawyer, King went to Atlanta for the weekend and when he returned to Memphis he checked into the Lorraine.

Although staff investigators did not reveal the contents of the tape that the FBI sent to King, former bureau officials said it contained information about extrajudicial matters.

F.A.O. Schwarz, chief counsel for the committee said the FBI had recorded the tape "improperly" by planting it in King's hotel room while he was in the room and installing wiretaps on his house and office phones.

The FBI letter to King said, "King, there is only one thing left for you to do. You know what it is. You have just 34 days in which to do it. You are done. There is but one way out for you."

The staff lawyer said the time left before King was to receive the Nobel Prize. Committee staff members said the idea behind the letter was to persuade King that the FBI had enough material to discredit him should he accept the prize.

King interpreted the letter to mean that he should commit suicide, staff members said.

Committee Chairman Frank Church, D-Idaho, said the staff testimony about FBI conduct toward King and other groups and individuals added up to a "long record of crimes undertaken by the FBI itself."

Sen. Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., said the attacks on King were the most dramatic example of FBI abuse of power. "What we're confronting here is beyond the law," Mondale said. "This is dirty work."

When the staff investigators said there was no evidence that King had ever committed a crime or was about to do so and he was never accused of being a Communist, Mondale said.

"Then he was pursued because he was a Negro," Mondale said, "and he was being killed by the forces of the law."

When the staff investigators said there was no evidence that King had ever committed a crime or was about to do so and he was never accused of being a Communist, Mondale said.

"Then he was pursued because he was a Negro," Mondale said, "and he was being killed by the forces of the law."

When the staff investigators said there was no evidence that King had ever committed a crime or was about to do so and he was never accused of being a Communist, Mondale said.

"Then he was pursued because he was a Negro," Mondale said, "and he was being killed by the forces of the law."

When the staff investigators said there was no evidence that King had ever committed a crime or was about to do so and he was never accused of being a Communist, Mondale said.

"Then he was pursued because he was a Negro," Mondale said, "and he was being killed by the forces of the law."

When the staff investigators said there was no evidence that King had ever committed a crime or was about to do so and he was never accused of being a Communist, Mondale said.

"Then he was pursued because he was a Negro," Mondale said, "and he was being killed by the forces of the law."

When the staff investigators said there was no evidence that King had ever committed a crime or was about to do so and he was never accused of being a Communist, Mondale said.

convened a meeting of top FBI officials to discuss how to discredit King in December 1963.

In addition to discussion of informers, electronic eavesdropping and wiretaps, the FBI officials also raised the possibility of "placing a good-looking informant in Dr. King's office."

The FBI also intended to try to stop two conversions from granting honorary degrees to King, tried unsuccessfully to block his audience with Pope Paul VI and unsuccessfully warned New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller against meeting with the civil rights leader, the Senate committee was told.

King's organization, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, was labeled by the FBI as a "hate group" and "violence prone" in its church-related activities.

King's organization, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, was labeled by the FBI as a "hate group" and "violence prone" in its church-related activities.

King's organization, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, was labeled by the FBI as a "hate group" and "violence prone" in its church-related activities.

King's organization, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, was labeled by the FBI as a "hate group" and "violence prone" in its church-related activities.

King's organization, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, was labeled by the FBI as a "hate group" and "violence prone" in its church-related activities.

King's organization, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, was labeled by the FBI as a "hate group" and "violence prone" in its church-related activities.

King's organization, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, was labeled by the FBI as a "hate group" and "violence prone" in its church-related activities.

King's organization, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, was labeled by the FBI as a "hate group" and "violence prone" in its church-related activities.

King's organization, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, was labeled by the FBI as a "hate group" and "violence prone" in its church-related activities.

King's organization, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, was labeled by the FBI as a "hate group" and "violence prone" in its church-related activities.

King's organization, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, was labeled by the FBI as a "hate group" and "violence prone" in its church-related activities.

King's organization, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, was labeled by the FBI as a "hate group" and "violence prone" in its church-related activities.

King's organization, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, was labeled by the FBI as a "hate group" and "violence prone" in its church-related activities.

King's organization, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, was labeled by the FBI as a "hate group" and "violence prone" in its church-related activities.

King's organization, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, was labeled by the FBI as a "hate group" and "violence prone" in its church-related activities.

King's organization, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, was labeled by the FBI as a "hate group" and "violence prone" in its church-related activities.

King's organization, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, was labeled by the FBI as a "hate group" and "violence prone" in its church-related activities.

King's organization, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, was labeled by the FBI as a "hate group" and "violence prone" in its church-related activities.

Franco Clinging To Life

Madrid (UPI) — Doctors battling to save Generalissimo Francisco Franco kept his body temperature at a bare minimum today in a last attempt to prevent further internal bleeding.

Franco, 82, survived a 17-hour bout with renewed digestive hemorrhage Tuesday. He was reported under heavy sedation with medical machines his only link to life.

A medical bulletin said Franco's body temperature had been reduced to 31 degrees, a level barely life to sustain life. It also reported a new heart flutter.

Doctors said lowering Franco's temperature was the only way short of surgery to keep him from bleeding to death internally.

"It is a desperate move," one doctor said. "It will prolong his life but in no way will help him."

The doctor said the low body temperature and resulting drop in blood pressure were ruled out a fourth operation, the only sure way to patch up his ruptured stomach.

Franco's body was linked to four machines supporting his breathing, heartbeat, kidneys and blood pressure.

Tubes protruded from his abdomen to drain the blood, and from his mouth, nose, bladder and rectum.

Franco has clung stubbornly to life for 32 days, fighting back from three heart attacks, three operations and complete kidney failure.

After ruling Spain for 36 years, he surrendered his chief of state powers Oct. 31 to his chosen successor, Prince Juan Carlos de Borbone.

James Judge, 54, a pilot of 721 John Balcarras Rd., was fatally injured today in a two-truck collision in east Harris County.

Judge's pickup truck collided with another pickup at the intersection of Judge Balcarras Rd. and U.S. Highway 90, east of the Houston city limits at 7:15 a.m.

He died in Eastway General Hospital, where the driver of the second pickup truck, David Barlow, 18, of 811 Talcott, was treated for shock and other injuries.

Judge was on his way to work on a job at the Arco refinery on Shallick Rd. when the accident occurred.

Texaco Official Sees Economic Turmoil If Oil Firms Broken Up to predict what kind of market structure might emerge if the marketing functions of the oil companies were dismantled.

(FROM PAGE 1)

However, he did say that such action would have a disruptive impact on the normal flow of petroleum products to the market. This, Card said, would reduce the number and variety of marketing outlets to the consumer.

Established supply patterns in various areas of the country would be substantially altered, according to Card, as companies under duress would tend to concentrate their investments and operations where they may have a competitive advantage.

He said the legislation before the subcommittee would have an adverse impact on the small businessman's ability to stay in or enter the oil marketing business at either the retail or wholesale level.

Disinvestment would deprive the consumer of additional product quality and research benefits built into competitive brand marketing by integrated petroleum companies," Card said.

Like other oil company executives who testified before the subcommittee, Texaco official said disinvestment would lessen the strong competition that now prevails in the marketing of petroleum products.

He said disinvestment proposals are based on "illogical, untold and very risky assumptions and would actually do serious harm to the nation's economy and would be costly to the American consumer."

Proponents of radical fragmentation of the U.S. petroleum industry cannot meet the heavy burden of demonstrating that their alternative, if they have one, would provide more efficiencies and productivity than the integrated structure which exists today.

He said the prospect of breaking up the industry has already had a chilling effect upon its members concerned about their professional futures.

"This is one of the worst possible times to consider disinvestment at any level," Card said. "It is a sure sign of our future economic growth," Card concluded.

Catalytic Converters Get So Hot They Can Start Fire

Austin (UPI) — Owners of 1975 cars and trucks equipped with catalytic converters should avoid driving through dry pasture lands, Texas Parks and Wildlife Department officials warn.

Temperatures inside the converters reach 1,300 degrees, and could start grass fires, the officials said.

Photo by Curtis Adams, Chronicle Staff

Dinosaur Bones

The skeleton of a Diplodocus brontosaurus dinosaur will be on display Monday at the Houston Museum of Natural Science in Hermann Park. The skeleton, found in 1902 in Wyoming, was purchased for the museum by the Lamar League of Houston. Reconstruction of the dinosaur, which existed 130 million years ago, began in 1970 and was completed last month. Sixty percent of the 70-foot-long and 24-foot-high dinosaur is original bone; the remainder is brown plaster.

MILD TEMPERATURE
Average temperatures in Texas range from 70 degrees in January to 82 degrees in August.

CHRISTIAN MAJORITY
About 91 per cent of Guyana's 800,000 inhabitants are Christians. The remainder are principally Hindus and Moslems.

Imported Blended Scotch Whisky - 40 Proof - © 1975 J.W. Dant Distillers Co., N.Y.

Are you secure enough to drink J.W. Dant Scotch? Or do you think a high price and a regal label mean good taste? With J.W. Dant, you can get the smooth taste of a high-priced Scotch. Without paying for a regal label. And like a high-priced Scotch, J.W. Dant is imported.

At the right price, J.W. Dant. Be impressed by great taste. At the right price, J.W. Dant.

MORE VALUE FOR YOUR MONEY. HOW SCOTCH CAN YOU GET?

IMPORTED
J.W. Dant
SCOTCH

PRODUCERS OF QUALITY SPIRITS SINCE 1856.

